OUTLINES.

The Navy Department has determined to make an effort to remedy the imperfections that exist in the battleship Texas. —— The pooling committee of the Seaboard & Roanoke Railroad stock publishes a statement regarding the committee's recent negotiations with Thomas F. Ryan for the sale of the road. ——Helmas Romaine, ex-Commissioner of Agriculture of the State of New Jersey, commits suicide by shooting himself with a pistol. —— Revenue cutters have been ordered to cruise along the Atlantic coast from December 1st to April 1st, for the purpose of affording aid to vessels in distress. —— Passengers arriving at Key West, Fla., from Havana, state that it is admitted that Weyler's campaign against Maceo has failed; Spaniards in Havana are despondent and consider the outlook gloomy; the Spanish Minister of the Colonies denies the truth of the story of a probable uprising in Porto Rico. —— Great excitement prevails in Albemarle county, Va., on account of threatened trouble with negroes; the whites are arming and are prepared to resist any attack from them. —— Gen. John Gill will remain sole receiver of the Cape Fear & Yadkin Valley Railroad, Judge Simonton, of the U S Circuit Court, having dismissed the petition for the appointment of a co-receiver. —— Don Carlos, of Spain, has published a manifesto denouncing his daughter, who recently eloped with a married man. —— A desperate situation of affairs prevails in Constantinople and the establishment of a European commission on the deposition of the Sultan is said to be the only hope of relief. —— New York markets: Money on call easy at 2½ per cent.; cotton quiet—middling gulf 7⅞c, middling 7⅝c; Southern flour dull—common to fair extra $2 85@3 45; good to choice $3 45@3 60; wheat—spot dull and easier; ungraded red 81@93c; corn—spot dull but steady; No. 2 28¼c at elevator and 29¼c afloat; spirits turpentine quiet at 27¼@27½c; rosin quiet—strained common to good $1 90.

Mr. McKinley is said to be a teetotaler, and will allow nothing stronger in the White House on festive occasions than tea.

The "era of prosperity," of which Wm. McKinley was the "advance agent," may have set in, but we notice a good many failures, daily, all the same.

Palmer, the veteran theater manager of New York, went under a few days ago. Palmer, the veteran decoy of Illinois, went under a short while before.

The city of Brooklyn has an elephant on hand, in the shape of a big safe which it bought and found too large to get into the house without taking a wall out or the roof off.

The New York World says the largest contributor to the Republican campaign in the past election was W. K. Vanderbilt, who chipped in $150,000. Cornelius threw in $50,000.

It is Mr. Wanamaker's opinion that "no one has a patent right on a Senatorship from Pennsylvania," but there are some gentlemen who have a pretty tight grip on it all the same.

There will be eleven colored Solons in the next North Carolina Legislature, nine in the House and two in the Senate. Who says there is no chance for colored genius to sprout in this State?

Gen. Pettus, who has been elected to the U. S. Senate from Alabama to succeed Senator Pugh, is seventy-four years old, and a resident of the same town—Selma—in which Senator Morgan resides.

The Baltimore students who showed their esteem for Rip by unhitching Joe Jefferson's horses, and pulling the carriage around town themselves, were conferring a marked distinction on Mr. Jefferson. They also distinguished themselves as asses much in need of a keeper. A man never honors another by degrading himself. Joe was doubtless disgusted, but couldn't help himself, as the young men had unhitched the horses and started off before he became aware of what they were doing.

The frog industry, which has for some time been hopping lively in New Jersey, is spreading into Maryland and promises to be a flourishing one. These frogs are shipped to the large cities where they are in great demand and bring good prices. They do not serve only the hind pedals as formerly but barbecue the vocalist and serve him whole.

Hon. Henry Watterson sees danger ahead for this country in the sectional spirit between the East and the West. In the meantime he is trying to make himself comfortable and get as much fun out of life as he can in a country where the wine is as thin as it is over there in Switzerland.

It is said that some of the Georgia statesmen, who voted for Alexander Stephens Clay for Senator, thought they were voting for Alec Stephens, of whose demise they hadn't heard, But as this story comes from South Carolina, its accuracy may be questioned.

Mr. John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, says he is willing to serve as U. S. Senator "if the people want him." But he isn't going around asking the people whether they "want him" very bad. He is in the ring and is going to take his chances on that.

Hon. Bourke Cockran, of New York, advises the Democrats in Congress to "pass the Revenue bill." We hardly think that, under the circumstances, Bourke's advice will pass among the Democrats in Congress.

If the X ray restores the sight of the blind as it is now predicted it will, there will be hope for some of those people who voted at the last election for the perpetuation of the British money standard in this country.

Li Hung Chang is getting disgusted and wants to retire. Secretary Carlisle is not the only disappointed statesman.

The Republican National Committee spent $2,500,000 and has about $90,000 to start business on next time.

To-morrow evening at the Opera House the Emmett Corrigan Company will open a week's engagement, beginning with the comedy-drama, "The Mountain Home." The company presents both comedy and drama. Mr. Corrigan, who was for a number of years leading man in Mr. Chas. Frohman's stock company, and later with Augustin Daly's attractions, has surrounded himself with a company of capable repertoire people. In the troupe are also several fine specialty artists; Mlle. Victoria Dana in different French and Spanish dances, and Mr. Augustus P. Thomas' illustrated song singing. Mr. Thomas was for a long time connected with Hoyt's "Trip to Chinatown." There will be a change of bill nightly and popular prices will prevail throughout the engagement.

On the opening night, Monday, every lady accompanied by a companion holding a paid thirty-cent ticket will be admitted free. Seats on sale at Gerken's.

KIRMESS AND CARNIVAL.

A Splendid Entertainment to be Given by Ladies in Aid of the Cornelius Harnett Monument Fund.

It is not very often that our people have an opportunity of enjoying such an entertainment as is now being prepared for them by the ladies of this city, and never has one been offered which more strongly appealed to their pride and patriotism.

Beginning on the 14th of December, and continuing for four nights, there will be a grand spectacular Kirmess and Carnival of the Nations, under the direction of Mr. McDonald, of New York, a professional trainer, who has managed similar entertainments in all the large cities, and who made such a brilliant success of the one presented in Richmond, Va., a year ago.

The object of the entertainment is to complete the fund already raised to erect a monument to Cornelius Harnett, the great Revolutionary patriot and statesman of the Cape Fear. So, those who patronize the enterprise will not only witness an interesting and beautiful series of performances; but will be contributing to a truly patriotic purpose, the neglect of which has long been a subject of reproach to the State, and especially to this community.

The Kirmess will consist of a series of dances in costume, selected from the most picturesque national dances, including those of Greece, Egypt, Spain, Japan, Sweden, Germany, as also Gypsy and Indian dances.

The number of ladies interested in this entertainment is very large, and its success is assured.

Connected with it and in the City Hall adjoining the Opera House, where it will be given, there will be the Kirmess Inn, where supper will be furnished on orders, and where booths of the different nations will be placed, from which many beautiful things may be bought.

It is hoped and expected that the Opera House and City Hall will be crowded to overflowing every evening during the Kirmess, as they ought to be when such attractions for so noble an object are offered.

The committees are as follows:

Executive — Mr. W. F. Robertson (chairman), Mesdames G. W. Kidder, Clayton Giles, Wm. Calder, Jas. Sprunt, P. H. Hoge, J. K. Nye and Miss Nellie Draper.

Costumes—Mrs. J. K. Nye.

Music —Mrs. G. W. Kidder.

Advertising — Col. Walker Taylor (chairman), Col. A. M. Waddell, Messrs. W. F. Robertson, Geo. Elliott, Jas. H. Cowan, A. M. Waddell, Jr., Capt. A. J. DeRosset.

Programme—Mr. Geo. Elliott (editor), Mesdames H. Parsley, D. Lippitt, W. Williams, D. Munds, and John T. Rankin.

Supper and Booth—Mesdames C. H. King, W. R. Kenan, T. H. McKoy, Fred Fosgate, E. J. Powers, F. Rheinstein, W. E. Storm.

House—Mr. R. S. Sweet (chairman), Mr. W. Merrill and Mesdames H. Parsley, J. L. James and G. Elliott.

Tickets—Mr. W. A. Whiting.

Secretary—Mrs. J. K. Nye.

DEATH OF MR. JOHN M'EVOY.

A Confederate Veteran and Much Esteemed Citizen of Wilmington.

A death occurred in Wilmington yesterday which was heard of with sincere sorrow by every working man in the city. It was the passing away of Maj. John McEvoy, who has been a machinist and carpenter at the Atlantic Coast Line shops for the past thirty years, and was a true, honorable and upright man in every walk of life and highly respected by his fellow employes. He was 74 years old at the time of his death which occurred at 10 o'clock yesterday at his residence, No. 810 North Second street.

Mr. McEvoy was a native of Ireland and served in the British army. Coming to this country, when the war between the States began he volunteered in the Confederate service and was promoted to a lieutenancy in a company in the Second regiment, N. C. State Troops, and served with credit and distinction throughout the war. He was a member of the Hibernian Benevolent Society ever since its organization in this city thirty years ago. His face was always familiar in the ranks of the Confederate Veterans and the Hibernian Benevolent Society. He leaves a wife and one daughter, Mrs. Jno. C. Rowan.

The funeral will take place to-morrow at 10 o'clock from St. Thomas' Pro-Cathedral. The Hibernian Society will attend in a body; also, Cape Fear Camp Confederate Veterans.

FOOT BALL.

Preparations for the Game Between Wilmington and the N. C. University Next Thursday.

The "Knights of the Gridiron" were out last night preparing for the Thanksgiving fray. All goes well with the boys, who will go into the game with the "ginger" necessary to accomplish the desired end—victory. Messrs. Sinclair and Hatch, the coachers of the team, give a very flattering account of the boys' prospects and look for them to win on Thursday. The University boys are in first class shape and feel confident that they will do our boys, but they say "nit." Last year the 'Varsity gave the Wilmington team a tough struggle and this year are going to use their best endeavors to regain their lost laurels. On the other hand our team are saying little but working hard and will put their best foot foremost.

It is to be hoped a large crowd will greet the players and no doubt Thanksgiving afternoon will find at least two thousand of the townsfolk cheering the purple and orange to victory. Every one knows the 'Varsity boys' colors—white and blue—and lots of their admirers, especially among the fair sex, will wear their ribbons.

RALEIGH NEWS BUDGET.

DELEGATES APPOINTED BY GOV. CARR TO THE TAMPA CONGRESS.

The Canvassing Newspaper Trouble—Republican Claims—A Liquor Dealer's Failure—The Cumnock Mine Trouble—Conflict of State and Federal Laws in Regard to Meeting of Presidential Electors.

[Special Star Correspondence.]

RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 23

Governor Carr has, at the request of the Governor of Florida, appointed the following delegates to attend a Congress to be held at Tampa, Fla., January 20th, for the purpose of discussing methods for the proper defence of the Gulf and South Atlantic seaports, and to devise means for their betterment, viz: Messrs. James Sprunt, Wilmington; Dr. W. G. Curtis, Southport; Jas. L. Fowle, Washington; Maj. A. J. Galloway, Goldsboro; Col. R. B. Creecy, Elizabeth City; W. S. Battle, Rocky Mount; J. E. Pogue, Raleigh; Peter D. Price, Greensboro; Dr. J. H. McAden, Charlotte; Wm. M. Cooke and Wm. E. Breese, Asheville.

Mr. R. C. Rivers, foreman and business manager of the Caucasian, has returned from Elliott City, whither he went to see Senator Butler relative to the recent trouble of that paper. Senator Butler was unaware that the Caucasian had been levied upon. He made arrangements to have the paper taken out of the sheriff's hands, and this will be done to-day. Editor Ayer's course in regard to the paper's difficulty, is strange, to say the least. He could have settled the matter the first day, but flatly declined to do so.

The Republicans now assert that they will have seventy-one members of the Legislature on joint ballot, with the prospect of an additional member from Jackson county.

D. C. Mangum, a local liquor dealer, made an assignment to-day, naming J. C. L. Harriss as assignee. The Southern Distillery Company, of Wilmington, N. C., is a creditor to the extent of $275.

The Langdon-Hinsley-Waites suits will hardly come to trial at the December term of Federal Court. All the papers have not been served as yet.

The State and Federal laws seem to conflict as to the time when the electors shall meet in this city and cast their vote. The Federal law says that the electors shall meet in Raleigh on the second Monday in January, while the State law says they must meet here at noon on the Tuesday preceding the first Wednesday of December.

Governor Carr holds that they must meet here in December, in compliance with the State law.

Rev. Charles Utley, the Populist Senator-elect from Wake, declines to state whether he will vote for Pritchard.

THE MORNING STAR.

The elections are over, but there will be many events of great interest during the coming twelve months.

Congress meets the first Monday in December. The North Carolina Legislature assembles early in January. It will elect a United States Senator, and there will be a great struggle between the friends of silver and the friends of gold.

Governor-elect Russell will be inaugurated, and everybody will be anxious to know what will be his policy.

There are many other questions of great public interest to be discussed and settled, and those who wish to keep abreast of the times must have a daily newspaper.

From all over the State THE MORNING STAR has received praise and congratulations for the consistent and determined fight it made for Bimetallism and true Democracy in the recent campaign. More than this, the increase in its circulation during the past few months has never, we feel sure, been equalled in the history of North Carolina daily newspapers.

Are you a subscriber to THE MORNING STAR? If not, why not?

Do you want a first-class daily paper at $5.00 per year, or $1.25 for three months? If so, subscribe to THE MORNING STAR.

Do you want a paper that prints the latest telegraphic news, the best local news, reliable market reports, excellent short stories, and the choicest miscellaneous matter? If so, subscribe to THE MORNING STAR.

Do not forget that THE MORNING STAR is the cheapest daily of its class in North Carolina. Its price is $5.00, while the published price of others ranges from $7.00 to $8.00.

OLD NEWSPAPERS FOR SALE AT THIS office. Suitable for wrapping paper.

Time Proves All Things.

Push, pluck and energy wins. We have not been in the mercantile business for the past eight years for nothing; we have made quite a snug little sum, and we lay our success to the fact that we have treated all alike, done business on the square, sold our goods at a fair and honest profit, and carrying these methods in our daily business we have built up a large and splendid cash trade. We claim to do the leading retail business in the city; paying cash for the goods we buy and selling them for the same. The holiday season is now drawing near, and we are specially anxious to move a big portion of our stock before it passes. We have a lovely line of Dolls of all grades and small Toys of all kinds that we have in our windows, a sample of which we would be glad to show. Our line of Notions is a very interesting stock in our store.

CORSETS branded "Our Best" at 23c each. A fine French woven Corset at 39c. The Vigilant, the best made long waisted Corset made for 50c. The R. & R. Corset at 75c and $1.00. ACKNOWLEDGING A FRAUD.

There are very few persons who know anything about the freedom with which the Republican party platform builders make pledges which they have no idea of carrying out, who attached any importance to their declarations of friendship for silver in the platform adopted at St. Louis. It was pretty well understood by those who could see through the trickery that the motive behind the declaration for the free and unlimited coinage of silver on "international agreement" was to deceive people who believe in bimetallism and thus secure their support for the party which professed to be in favor of the only bimetallism which it held to be practicable and effective.

This was really the plank which saved the Republican party, for there are thousands upon thousands of bimetallists who voted for it as the safer thing, and preferable to independent action by this country on a 16 to 1, or any other ratio, who would not have voted for it if it had repudiated bimetallism and declared for gold monometallism.

No Republican organ or speaker in the campaign from Mr. McKinley down dares to hint at gold monometallism, or to confess that the party was not in earnest and didn't mean what it said when it incorporated that plank in its platform. In accounting for the change of sentiment in the West and the vote of the farmers, which was so much larger than expected, for McKinley, Mark Hanna said the farmers were won by the assurance that the Republican party meant what it said in its platform, that it was for bimetallism and not for gold monometallism, which was virtually saying that if the Republican party had been believed to be for gold alone it would have been beaten, as it undoubtedly would have been, in spite of Hanna's "pilgrims," his meandering generals, his eclesiastical circulars and his millions of dollars. They didn't dare to hint at gold monometallism then, and it is only since the election that any of them has ventured to confess the fraud that was perpetrated on the people, deliberately perpetrated with the intention of holding the votes of Republicans and winning the votes of "sound money" Democrats which otherwise might have been cast for Wm. J. Bryan.

The New York Sun, which claims to be a Democratic paper, is a better Republican paper than nine-tenths of the Republican organs in this country. In the past campaign it was one of McKinley's most vigorous supporters and supported him mainly on account of the financial plank, which declared for bimetallism and for the free and unlimited coinage of silver on international agreement, with the supplemental pledge to use its best endeavors, if entrusted with power, to "promote" such agreement.

The Sun professes to be a sincere, honest journal, which despises and abhors frauds. It supported McKinley and advised Democrats to vote for him on this very plank, and yet but a few days ago it gave utterance to the following:

"A good many Democrats, some Republicans, of more or less eminence, and the British Bimetallic League are still talking about bimetallism and the prospect of some change or other from our gold monometallism, of sixty years' standing, to bimetallism. A circular of the aforesaid Bimetallic League, of which 'Aldenham,' that is Lord Aldenham, is President, informs us that the recent campaign in this country resulted in a 'victory for international as opposed to national bimetallism.' Of course the national bimetallism which failed was silver monometallism; but, that slip needn't be discussed. Then the circular quotes this passage of the St. Louis money plank and builds more hopes upon it:

"'We are opposed to the free and unlimited coinage of silver, except by international agreement between the leading commercial nations of the world, which we pledge ourselves to promote.'

"This was a continuous text in Bryan's speeches. 'As the Republican party hereby confess,' said that smart young man very frequently, 'that the gold standard is not a good thing, why shouldn't the United States discard it and again take up silver?'

"The Republican party confessed no such thing. This international agreement plank was never of practical importance, nor was it intended to be. All that was meant by it was that, out of deference to a decaying but still widespread superstition, the Republican party was willing to hear again what could be said for silver, and to discuss the currency question with other nations; but sense and experience forbade and forbid the idea that anything could come of it.

"Bimetallism is a dream, and always has been a dream. The delusion that gold and silver were ever coupled in veritable bimetallism must come to an end like the ancient coupling of brass and iron. There isn't going to be any bimetallism, because there can't be; and that's the whole of it. Gold, alone, is the standard, as a simple and predestined feature of progressive civilization, to be superseded by some other metal when one more convenient becomes available. Bimetallic talk can only make mischief; it cannot make bimetallism."

The Sun may not be authorized to speak for the Republican party, we do not think it is, for we do not think it ought to be authorized to speak for any party, but it can and does speak for the men who control the financial policies of that party, and dictated the financial plank of the platform adopted at St. Louis, and now we find it substantially confessing, fifteen days after the election, that this plank was a fraud, inserted "in deference to a decaying but widespread superstition," that is to humbug the voters who might still be under the influence of this "superstition." It didn't mean anything more, wasn't intended to mean anything more, simply a fraud deliberately uttered, that's all."

The Sun and other "sound money" gold monometallists, who made good use of this fraud in the campaign up to the day of the election, now see signs of a disposition to take the party at its word, to construe this platform as meaning what it said. Bimetallists are beginning to urge that when the Republican party takes the reins of Government it proceed to carry out its pledge by endeavoring to secure an International Congress, with a view to doing something to restore silver and give us the bimetallic instead of the single gold standard.

To offset this movement and defeat it, if it can, the Sun, contends that there was nothing in that platform; that it was merely impracticable talk, by which the party is not bound and by which no sensible man would suppose it to be bound. It goes further now than it would, with all its claims its claims to honesty, dare to have gone before the election; goes further than even the Indianapolis decoy convention went, which did not declare for gold monometallism. They are afraid now that the fraud may react on them and that the party will be asked to do what it promised so positively and solemnly to do if given the opportunity to do it.

We are waiting to see how many of the McKinley supporters will follow the Sun in confessing this fraud.

MINOR MENTION.

Immediately after the election there was a grand flourish by the papers that supported McKinley over the increased activity among the manufactories, and the indicated revival of business generally. This was heralded as a verification of the predictions that the election of McKinley would result in a return of prosperity and good times. Commenting on these rejoicings we took occasion to say that we thought they were premature, and that while an increase of business and some improvement might reasonably be looked for, no boom need be expected, for there was nothing in the conditions to create a boom. These rose colored announcements did much to excite expectations which have not been realized, and the result is the disappointment of many who had based calculations on speedy, material and permanent improvement. The commercial reports have not justified the exaggerated statements made as to the revival that had taken place and the predictions of the continued growth. Bradstreet's for the past week says:

Jobbers and other wholesale dealers in general merchandise do not report the anticipated increases in the volume of goods distributed this week. There are increased purchases of holiday goods, and the tone of the market for staples is one of encouragement. Relatively the heaviest demand has been for dry goods, shoes and groceries, but even in these lines, particularly dry goods, the volume has been smaller than expected and disappointment is a result. The many industrial enterprises which have started up continue a feature of each day's news bulletin, but there is reason to believe the significance of these exhibits has been over-emphasized in some instances.

In addition to the failure in the anticipated increase of business, every day brings reports of the closing up of industrial establishments and failures that would have been charged to the "silver agitation" if they had occurred before the election. We do not believe in looking on the dark side, that's not our habit, but it isn't well to excite expectations that cannot be realized, and must result in disappointment that may prove very disastrous to many.

* * *

We suppose General Miles, of the U. S. Army, understands his business, but it seems to us that for commander of the army he shows remarkable freedom in discussing with the newspaper reporters the weakness of this country from a military standpoint, especially in view of the war talk that is now being indulged in, as the possible outcome of the situation in Cuba. Gen. Miles is reported as saying to a reporter in Cincinnati that our regular army was too small by one-half for emergencies, that in the event of war the Government would be compelled to rely upon the militia (which, by the way, it always does), and that while the personnel of our army is superior to that of any country in the world, we have no guns to fight with and it takes two years to make a high power gun, all of which may be so, but all of which, in our opinion, is not just the kind of information that should be given to the world at a time when it might do a good deal of harm and encourage some fool power like Spain to buck up against us and take advantage of our supposed weakness. We do not think there is any probability of a serious brush with Spain, but this continued talk about our defenceless condition, especially when coming from men high in authority, would be well calculated to encourage another nation which had a grievance against us to show its teeth.

* * *

The newspapers and stumpers and "financiers" who opposed the election of Wm. J. Bryan and the free and unlimited coinage of silver, have boasted much of the "grand verdict" of the people which relegated Mr. Bryan, called the Canton statesman to the front and "settled the silver question." They won the victory; there is no doubt of that—but it was a "verdict" which cost a good deal of money. The following table, published by the New York Journal, gives the amount of contributions by States and sections:

New York	$3,000,000
Pennsylvania	2,500,000
Connecticut	1,000,000
Massachusetts	1,500,000
Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont	500,000
New Jersey	1,000,000
Illinois	1,000,000
Ohio	1,000,000
Southern States	2,000,000
Western States	2,500,000
Total	$16,000,000

This looks like a very large sum for election purposes, to help the people render a "verdict," and it is, but the Journal says it has been well ascertained that this sum was contributed. It was openly boasted by the McKinley organs during the campaign that Mr. Hanna's money resources were practically unlimited; that he had all the money he could use, and could get as much more as he asked for. This money was used (it could not have been honestly used) in one of the most original and remarkable campaigns ever witnessed in this country, and yet they talk about "the verdict of the people."

CURRENT COMMENT.

—We shall have no war with Spain unless Spain forces it, but no matter what Spain does or threatens the time must come when we shall quit using our navy to drive Cuban trade away from our ports.—New York World, Dem.

—The tin industry is booming. It is growing more rapidly under the milder coaxing of the Wilson tariff than it did when pushed by the hot-bed forcing of the McKinley tariff. But, none the less, the lusty infant cries out for "more protection!"—Phil. Record, Dem.

—The egg-throwing in Kentucky at Secretary Carlisle gave the State to McKinley. But for that, according to expert testimony, the Democracy would have led by from 5,000 to 10,000 votes. We dare say that Blackburn's intemperate harangues also acted unfavorably. Well, we may do better next time, even in Kentucky.—Augusta Chronicle, Dem.

—From the amount of gold bug literature The State continues to receive, we are informed that the campaign of education is still proceeding, as much so from the standpoint of the goldites as from that of Mr. Bryan. The gold-bugs are making a howl over the advice of Mr. Bryan to the silver clubs to continue their organizations while their own clubs and committees continue to fill the mails with their campaign documents.—Richmond State, Dem.

SPIRITS TURPENTINE.

—Sandford Express: One man at Aberdeen, Moore county, showed his admiration for Grover Cleveland and J. P. Caldwell, editor of the Charlotte Observer, by voting for them for President and Vice President at the late election. The vote was counted, too.

—Smithfield Herald: Two white men and a negro slept in a box car at Selma Monday night. The car was loaded with cotton. Early next morning the negro struck a match to find his cap and the cotton caught fire. The cotton and car was burned and the three men were brought here and placed in jail.

—Wadesboro Intelligencer: Rev. Chas. H. Martin, Congressman for this district, still preaches once in awhile. He held forth to a large congregation at Polkton last Sunday. —Col. Oliver H. Dockery spent Tuesday in Wadesboro. By the way, it may be said with certainty that the "Old War Horse of the Pee Dee" will be a factor in the great contest over the United States Senatorship soon to be waged at Raleigh. And there are not a few of the knowing ones who say that he is "strictly in it."

—Winston Sentinel: One of the most aged and withal most sprightly women seen in Winston for some time was here for a few hours yesterday. She was a negro woman, aged 102 years. Her name was Phillissa Flynt. She was en route from a visit to relatives in Davie county to her home in Stokes, where she says she was born and has lived all her life. She was able to move about as spry almost as a girl, notwithstanding she looks like a skeleton. All of her teeth, save two huge "tusks," are gone.

—Monroe Enquirer: Chinch bugs have been at work on young small grain in some sections of the county. We suppose that the recent cold snap has put an end to their depredations for this season. —We hear some complaint of weevils in corn. This is something very rarely known at this season of the year. We suppose that the dry hot weather just before the corn was gathered hatched the weevils. —At a colored festival at Joe McDonald's, in Buford township, on Tuesday night of last week, pistols played a prominent part. John Newman put bullets in Tony McKinney and Robert Garris, and Addison Watts "plugged" Jim Gant. The razor usually plays the leading part at colored festivals.

—Rockingham Index: The handsome residence of Mr. W. T. Jones at Carthage was destroyed by fire last Sunday morning. It cost about $4,000 and was insured for $2,500. —Steele's Mill is now almost completed and will be in active operation by the middle of December. A large number of dwellings have been erected and people are moving in them by the score. —Benjamin Ledbetter grew monotonously tired of having his rye injured by the hogs and determined to stop it. Thursday he was driving on his farm and saw some hogs in his field. He immediately went back home, got his gun and fired at the hogs. Upon close examination Mr. Ledbetter found that they were his own choice pigs that he highly prized. They had escaped and had met death at the hands of their owner.

"Whose Game Was It?"

When two men are hunting together, either for large game or small, there is frequently considerable difficulty in determining to which one the dead game belongs, especially when the shots are fired simultaneously or when shot or bullets of the same size are used by both hunters. Dr. J. W. Hall, in Recreation, discusses at considerable length the question, "Whose Game Was It?"

When two persons standing side by side shoot with shot of the same size at a bird, the question is practically unanswerable, though if both hit the bird the number of shot in the game would, of course, have to be considered. Courtesy gives the doubtful game to the one whose bag is lightest.

An experienced hunter can usually tell when he presses the trigger whether it is a killing shot or not, and when two such men shoot together there is rarely any difficulty, as each knows whether he held on or not and does not hesitate to say so if he feels that he missed.

When hunting with a man who claims everything, it is best to quit. Some men, even if their second shell misses fire, will contend that they killed two birds rods apart. They can make marvelous shots around corners, over hilltops and through trees, and they quite spoil an honest man's sport.

In a dining room the walls of which are covered with old red burlap above the wainscoting the hangings are of old red denim, on which there are appliqued scrolls of black velveteen which are outlined with a fine gold cord.

TETE-A-TETE.

Along the country road came Sue;
Her heart was very sore at Ned;
Not far behind came Edward, too,
Not knowing Sue was on ahead.

That morning they had fallen out,
And both rushed forth to take a spin.
They knew not what 'twas all about,
But both knew what it ended in.

Now Sue a hedge is passing by;
Alas, her tire is punctured there!
She halts beside the road to try
To fill the flatted tube with air.

Then Ned comes wheeling bravely on—
A thorn waylays his tire, too;
And soon, with wind and patience gone,
He halts across the way from Sue.

Alack, he finds with sinking heart
That far behind he left his pump!
He can't retreat, he cannot start,
Now surely he is up a stump.

When, lo, across the dusty road
The gentle girl who sees his plight
Comes trippling with her pump; the load
Slips from his heart and out of sight.

A look, a thought, a spoken word,
A hasty pumping in of air,
The tender singing of a bird,
And only peace is smiling there.

Along the country road came Sue,
Her heart at Ned no longer sore,
And by her side rode Edward, too,
And now they quarrel nevermore.

SUNDAY SELECTIONS.

— The man who has no God to worship worships himself.

— The advocate of a good cause should not indulge in unseemly tempers. It will be hard for the man who assails his brethren with bitter and spiteful words to convince the general public that he is in the enjoyment of the blessing of perfect love.—Baltimore Christian Advocate.

— Rev. Thomas O. Summer, D. D., said: "Holiness is moral goodness—integrity of moral character and conduct. The holiness of God comprehends all moral perfections; the holiness of man comprehends all the graces and virtues with wh'ch he was originally endowed endowed by his creator, or those which are proper to his renewed nature."

If our hearts are full of shadows and we will look down and the sight of our own shadow will deepen the gloom. Nervous Shock.

Now, we often hear of obscure nervous derangements with no clear cause following railway accidents, and of strange nervous symptoms complicating such obvious physical injuries as may occur, and many questions are apt to be raised as to the possibility of such phenomena being due to any known degree of concussion or injury of the nervous centers, and not infrequently much doubt is thrown on the bona fides of plaintiffs in such cases. While, however, quite admitting the frequency with which fraud is at the bottom of claims against railway companies, it does not do to forget that something else besides mere physical injury may result from a railway accident. If terror, a sudden and intense horror, or, as some would say, a "mere nervous shock," without any physical injury at all, will produce long lasting changes in the mental and nervous mechanism, it would be strange indeed if such changes were not found in patients who, whatever the nature or extent of their other injuries, have gone through the terrible shock of a serious railway accident. From the moment of the first dancing on the rails, through the terrible time when passengers and portmanteaus are being tossed helplessly about, up to the moment when, with a final crunch, all becomes still, may not be a long time; but, short as it is, it is a spell of the intensest agony and terror which can be conceived, and it would indeed be passing strange if it did not write deeply on many nervous systems its note of horror.—London Hospital.

Thrifty France.

"In France," said Max Schottek, who represents a great American dry goods firm in Paris, "nearly every man saves something. It doesn't matter how small his income may be, he manages to put by a portion of his earnings. In this respect the thrift of the people stands out in marked contrast to the prodigal ways of the citizens of the United States. Here it seems essential to spend a big sum of money to get much pleasure; in fact, the amount of pleasure seems measured by the money expended. But I think it undoubtedly true that the French people get more enjoyment out of life than the Americans.

"I see much to admire in this nation—its wonderful progress, its inventive genius, its unrivaled resources. There is nothing in Europe like your luxurious railways or your fine hotels. But with all that I had rather live in France. Our nation has a bad name, I find, in this country, but the reputation isn't deserved. There is as much real religion and pure home life in France as exists in any land. We go to church early Sunday morning and in the afternoon to the picture galleries or for a jaunt into the woods. I think you would be better off over here if you enjoyed Sunday more after the liberal fashion that prevails across the ocean."—Washington Post.

England Wrong, America Right.

"What is the proper spelling?" asks a correspondent. "Should it be 'tire,' or 'tyre?'" I answer with fear and trembling, for I know by experience what heated passions are sometimes aroused by questions of this gravity. I find, however, that Dr. Johnson is on the side of "tire," though he notices the spelling "tyre," while Webster gives "tire" and ignores "tyre" altogether.

The interchange of "i" and "y" in words of this shape seems to be purely a matter of convention or caprice, and one can only be guided by the ruling of the recognized authorities. Webster and Johnson are good enough for me, and I would suggest to the various pneumatic "tyre" companies now advertising themselves that they should remodel their spelling. Some time back I had a passage at arms with a gentleman over the same question in the spelling of the word "tiro," and the question was decided, to my mind, by the authority of Professor Skeat, who pronounces "tyro" a "gross misspelling." So far as I can see, very much the same might be said of "tyre."—London Truth.

The iron grasp of scrofula has no mercy upon its victims. This demon of the blood is often not satisfied with causing dreadful sores, but racks the body with the pains of rheumatism until Hood's Sarsaparilla cures.

COME UP INTO THE MOUNTAINS.

Come up into the mountains, come up into the blue!
Oh, friend down in the valley, the way is clear for you!
The path is full of perils and devious, but your feet
May safely thread its windings and reach to my retreat.
The mountains, oh, the mountains! How all the ambient air
Bends like a benediction and all the soul is prayer!
How blithely on this summit the echoing wind's refrain
Invites us to the mountains, God's eminent domain!
Oh, soul below in valleys where aspirations rise
No higher than the plunging of water fowl that flies,
Come up into the mountains, come up into the blue!
Leave weary leagues behind you the lowland's meaner view.
The autumn's rotting verdure, the sapless grasses browned;
Come where the snows are lilies that bloom the whole year round.
Here in the subtle spirit of all these climbing hills
Man may achieve his dreaming and be the thing he wills!

—Joseph Dana Miller in Munsey's.

A FAIRY TALE.

A fisherman was living in a humble cabin with his wife Stora. One day after having uselessly spent several hours on the river bank he suddenly pulled from the water an immense fish with gold scales and a gold crown on its head.

"Ah!" cried he. "Here's a fine catch. I will take it to the king. He will certainly pay me generously for it." But the fish said: "Give me my liberty. I am an enchanted prince and can accomplish any wish you may express."

"All right," good naturedly replied the fisherman. "This is the first time I have ever heard a fish talk, and that in itself is proof of your claim."

Dropping the fish into the water, he returned to his cabin to tell the adventure to his wife. "What!" cried she. "And from that fish, who no doubt has the power of a fairy, you demanded nothing!"

"No," said the fisherman. "It did not occur to me. Anyway, what could I have asked for?"

"What!" she exclaimed. "When we are here in a miserable cabin! You might at least have asked for a cottage! Go back. He is under obligations to you. You saved his life. He can refuse you nothing."

The meek and humble fisherman was not at all anxious to make the attempt, but finally giving way to his wife's determination he went to the water's edge and called: "Fish of gold! Royal fish!"

"Why do you call me?" asked the fish.

"Alas," replied the timid fisherman, "I am obeying my wife, who does not always think as I do."

"And what does she wish at present?" said the fish kindly.

"Ah," he replied sadly, "she is not satisfied with our small cabin and wishes a larger one."

"Very well. Return home and you will find your wish accomplished."

In fact, in place of the miserable cabin was a beautiful cottage. Stora was sitting radiantly happy on a bench in front of the door. Taking her husband by the hand, she said, "Just come and see how beautiful it is!" There was a bedroom, with a comfortable bed, a kitchen with a complete assortment of cooking utensils, and near by a low court, from which came the cackle of geese and chickens. Then followed a garden full of vegetables and an orchard of fruit trees. "Is it not charming?" cried Stora.

"Yes, indeed," replied the astonished fisherman, and both heartily rejoiced in their good fortune. Fifteen days later Stora said to her husband: "I have been thinking that we were too modest in making our wishes known. This cottage is too small, and there is not a single field joined to the garden. I should like to have a beautiful country residence."

"What folly!" cried her husband. "What would we do with a country residence?"

"Make yourself easy. I know well of what benefit it would be to us. You have nothing to do but to again see your friend, the golden fish."

The poor fisherman, not being able to resist, went out with bowed head.

"Why do you call me?" cried the crowned fish.

"Alas," replied the fisherman, "I come in obedience to my wife, whose wishes are not always in accord with mine."

"What does she want now?"

"She thinks she would like a beautiful country residence."

"All right. Your wish is accomplished."

The fisherman, thanking him, turned homeward. To his surprise, he found before him a large house with court, granaries and stables. His wife, waiting for him in her loveliest Sunday dress, led him into their new home. Here was the master's room and there a large one for the servants. The chimney was full of hams. Not far off was the milkhouse and near by a granary full of wheat. In the stable were many beautiful cows. There was a pigeon house on the roof of the shed, which was well filled with fat sheep, and a couple of storks were on the chimney. Around the house were gardens, fields and prairies. "Is this not a delightful place?" enthusiastically inquired Stora.

"Yes," replied the fisherman. "See that we live here in peace."

A few days passed, when one morning Stora said to her husband: "It is indeed a good thing to have a country house like this, but we can do better. We can have a chatean and live as nobles do. This is what you must demand of your magic fish, who is in your debt for life itself."

"No, indeed," said the fisherman. "Certainly not. I will not make this additional demand of him. He would be angry, and he would have good cause."

"Oh, I beg of you," implored his wife, "go to him again. He will refuse you nothing. I cannot live in this farmhouse. If I stay here, I shall be ill. If I have not a chatean, I shall die."

The apprehensive fisherman again obeyed, and the fish said to him, "Go. Your new wish is granted."

When he returned home, what a wonderful change awaited him! In place of his rustic house he found a beautiful chatean with flag waving on the top of its lofty tower. A wide moat surrounded the high walls inclosing the domain, and on its drawbridge stood Stora in a silk gown with a gold chain about her neck. Taking her husband by the hand, she led him into their apartment. Entering the large door, they passed from room to room completely and beautifully furnished with soft carpets, superb hangings, statuary and pictures. On every side were domestics in livery. In the court stood a carriage with two beautiful horses, a coachman on the seat and a footman up behind. Near by was a garden full of flowers, a conservatory and an aviary.

"Ah," said Stora, with an air of triumph, "what do you think of all this? Is this not better than a country house? Are you not content?"

"Yes," replied the fisherman, "but for the love of all that's good, let us stay here."

A few days later Stora remarked to her husband: "I was on the tower today and was astonished and grieved to find how little land we have. It is not enough that you should be a lord. You must have a kingdom. You must be king."

"What extravagance!" cried the fisherman. "Never, never will I permit it."

"If you do not wish to be king," replied Stora in a resolute tone, "I nevertheless am determined to be queen, and I desire you to go and explain my wish to the friend, who is under so many obligations to you, to the powerful magician."

"No, indeed," reiterated the fisherman. "He has already been wonderfully generous with us. I do not wish to irritate and tire him."

But the ambitious Stora insisted, begged and threatened and the poor fisherman again gave way to her inflexible will. The fish looked upon him in pity, saying sadly, "This time also the wish of your wife is granted."

In place of the lordly chatean there was a grand palace with a magnificent facade and four imposing towers. A marble stairway covered with rich carpet led to the first floor, to the reception room where the ministers, generals and courtiers were congregated and where Stora sat on a golden throne, an ermine mantle about her and a crown of diamonds on her head.

"Finally," said she enthusiastically to her husband, "here is a burst of fortune, here is power, here is happiness! There is nothing more I could wish."

"God be praised," he fervently replied.

A few moments later, with a grave air, she took him by the hand, drawing him into the embrasure of a window that she might talk to him unobserved, and said to him, "I am well satisfied that I am a queen, am contented with the respect of my ministers and the tranquillity of my subjects, but sometimes the sun rises too late; sometimes the moon is too late, and sometimes the wind whistles and blows in a manner that inconveniences me greatly. I wish to govern them according to my pleasure. The fairy fish can refuse you nothing. He must grant me this one additional favor. It will be the last."

The peaceful fisherman was stupefied. He could not believe she spoke seriously. But when she, in a resolute manner, repeated her demand he declared he would never take part in any such insanity.

But, alas, the poor man had not the courage to resist the headstrong will of his companion. After violent protestations he again acquiesced.

He went in fear and trembling to perform his strange mission. This time the fish regarded him coldly and said to him in a formidable voice:

"This is enough. Your wife is insane, and you are an imbecile. You will no longer have either chatean or lands. In pity I will give you back your ancient cottage. You deserve no more."

As the fairy fish disappeared beneath the waters the fisherman turned homeward with bowed head to find his wife dressed in wretched rags and sitting upon the doorsill of their old cabin, lamenting their lost wealth.—Translated From the French For Short Stories.

THEY EAT SOAP.

Regular Army Soldiers Do It Sometimes to Keep Out of Prison.

Hungry indeed must be the man who will eat soap, yet it is a fact that soap eating is common among the regular army soldiers stationed at Governors island and Forts Wadsworth and Hamilton. The same peculiar habit is said to be prevalent among the boys in blue in Uncle Sam's service at other army posts in the United States. The soap these warriors eat is not the delicately scented, perfumed kind, but the rankest, strongest, cheapest and perhaps the worst soap made. It costs the government about a cent a bar.

Soap eating has been a feature of army life for so long that the oldest veteran cannot recall the time when it was not the practice on certain occasions to eat soap. It is said to have been a common habit with the soldiers in the British army during the American Revolution. The soldiers eat the soap not from choice, but for a reason no one would guess.

It is not a pleasant thing to say, but it is true, nevertheless, that the regular army of the United States contains an element that the officers in command find at times most difficult to control. In Castle William on Governors island are built some of the darkest and most dismal dungeons it is possible to conceive of. They are deep down, and a prisoner confined in one of them is so far removed from the outside world that he cannot hear a sound or see his hand before his face at midday with the sun shining brightly. These cells or dungeons are used as places of confinement for soldiers who have defied the rules or broken away from the restraints of discipline. The offenders are mostly of the lowest class. All of them dread the punishment of confinement in one of Castle William's dungeons, and the utmost ingenuity is exercised in devising excuses that will stay the hand of discipline.

"New" soldiers who haven't been initiated often pretend to be ill. This never works. Keen post physicians soon discover the deception. The old veterans in the business, men who have records of 15 and 20 day drunks and have time and again told their superiors to go to Jericho or some other place, follow the never failing system of soap eating.

The scheme is to take a piece of soap—ordinary washing soap is used at all the posts—cut off a piece about as large as a quarter and twice as thick, chew it up and wash it down with water. It takes but a few moments for the vile stuff to work. There is a most violent wrenching at the stomach, a deadly sickness seizes the prisoner, and he froths at the mouth. Of course he is hustled off to the hospital, where an emetic is administered, and there he remains in a clean, comfortable cot, with the best of eat and drink, until the extreme weakness which his unusual meal has caused leaves him.

The soap eater invariably wins. Although the physician may strongly suspect the cause of the prisoner's illness, he is under orders not to make any experiments, and a soldier in confinement suffering from any ailment of whatever nature must be removed to the post hospital at once.—New York Journal.

Cause For Shame.

Old Fivers—Look here. To come right down to the solid truth, aren't you just a little ashamed of your old daddy? Honest, now.

Young Fivers—Why, guv'nor, I cawn't say ashamed exactly, but you know you are not always in good fawm, you know.

Old Fivers—Well, I don't blame you for being ashamed of me. Every time I look at you and think what a job I made of your bringing up, I am ashamed of myself.—London Fun.

THE PETRIFIED CITY.

Explorers Have Failed to Find the Fabled Town.

Among cities of fable the petrified variety was interesting. We have it in most parts of the world. Our prosaic islands knew it, but as a submarine curiosity. In the days when London enjoyed the presence of an embassador from Tripoli that personage astonished the Royal society once at least. The famous traveler, Dr. Shaw, had mentioned the story of a petrified village near Cyrene. Scientific people derided it; scientific people upheld it. In short, a discussion arose. Some members of the Royal society, recollecting that there were grave and responsible inhabitants of Tripoli within reach, put the question before the embassador. He explained with a vengeance. One of his friends, a person, of course, whose honor could not be impugned, was well acquainted with the spot. Shaw made a great mistake in describing it as a village. City was the proper word. The walls inclosed an exact circle, numerous streets crossed at right angles, with shops and avenues of trees, and a noble castle stood in the midst. In the shops and streets were people variously employed—the gentlemen noted in especial a baker and his customers, loaves in hand, a woman suckling her baby, etc. He entered the castle and found a king, or somebody of rank, lying on a gorgeous bed, with guards about him. Animals abounded, such as donkeys, camels, oxen, sheep, birds. But everything was stone of a peculiar bluish tint, even the money lying on shop counters and in people's hands. Witness brought a quantity away, and the embassador regretted that he could not find some pieces presented to himself at the moment. A description was forthcoming, however. The coins were as large as English shillings, with a horse's head on one side and writing in unknown characters on the other. A happy little touch represented that many of the figures had lost head or limbs—petrifactions will not endure forever, of course. The Royal society expressed warm gratitude for this communication.

It is scarcely worth while to seek the origin of a fable which is sufficiently explained by the vagaries of imagination. That it was localized at Cyrene, among countless other spots, may be due to the existence of a large and well preserved necropolis there, with many statues erect in Shaw's time, if not now. He himself made a long and perilous journey to Harnam, in Numidia, where, as the Arabs avouched, a Bedouin encampment was on view, surrounded by oxen and sheep, all turned to stone. In this instance no shadow of foundation for the legend could be found. But it was so widely diffused in those days that rumors of the marvel reached the court of France, and M. le Maire, consul at Tripoli, received instructions to inquire. He employed some janizaries, who undertook to bring away a petrified Bedouin, but they pointed out, very reasonably, that a full grown specimen would be too heavy. The consul declared that a baby would satisfy him, to begin with at any rate. After many months, during which his interest was kept up by frequent drafts for expenses, the janizaries returned, and, sure enough, they had a stone baby—a very pretty one, too, for it proved afterward to be a little statue of Cupid, found among the ruins of Leptis. They had broken off the wings and quiver. Bruce also was tempted to visit this spot, called Rai-Sem, and Captain Smyth of her majesty's ship Adventure went in search of it, but in another direction. The sultan of Fezzan told him a story so much like the embassador's that he traveled, full of hope, nine days through a desert country. In this case, however, there were really buildings and has-reliefs of men and animals, if not statues.—London Standard.

The National Capital.

Apropos of nothing in particular the St. Louis Star demands that some city nearer the center of the country be made the capital. It does not mention St. Louis, but it probably has that city in mind. It says that Washington is practically no more than a suburb of New York. "What is now needed is a seat of national government which has more of a spirit of independence and self support about it without being dependent in any degree upon neighboring cities for its glamour. Many traveled people smile when Washington is mentioned as the Paris of America. There is no comparison between the two places, allowing even for difference in population and age."

Cost of a Good Skeleton.

Skeletons? They are prepared for the use of physicians and medical students, and the best come from Paris and cost from $35 to $50. The medical profession prefers them to the American make, which can be had for $8 or $10, for the Frenchman has mastered the secret of treating the bones so that they are shorn of all offensive odors. The American has not yet discovered the secret, and the demand for his product is devoted solely to the poorer classes of students and doctors, secret organizations and artists.—Kansas City World.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

SUNDAY MORNING, NOV. 22, 1896

BATTLESHIP TEXAS.

Imperfections in Construction That Will Have to be Remedied.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The Navy Department has decided that certain imperfections exist in the battleship Texas and has determined to make an effort to remedy them. These conclusions were reached at a consultation of bureau chiefs in Secretary Herbert's office this morning, to which Captain Henry Glass, commander of the unlucky ship, had been summoned from New York. Up to this time the Department has declined to recognize that anything was the matter with the ship and under these circumstances there has been a clash of opinion between Captain Glass and Admiral Bunce, the latter desiring to have the Texas go out and drill with his squadron while Captain Glass, who is compelled to risk his life and crew on the vessel, has urged that she be permitted to stay in a navy yard long enough to correct various defects which his intimate connection with the vessel convinces him imperatively need correction. It was decided at to day's conference, which lasted over an hour, that the ship should remain at Brooklyn at least thirty days, that new air-compressors should be installed to operate the hydraulic turret turning and steering apparatus, which has so far fallen altogether below expectations because the air pressure "cushioning" the water power was uncertain. While this and other work is going on, Constructor Bowles, who built the ship, is to seize the opportunity to put a lot of bracing and stiffening into the frames and make an attempt to patch up the alleged water-tight doors which were so instrumental in sinking the ship recently. Captain Glass is still here, calling the attention of the bureau chiefs to other desirable safeguards against collapse and disaster, which he hopes may be done simultaneously with the other work.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

December Wheat Closed Higher—Corn and Oats Advanced in Sympathy With Wheat.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

CHICAGO, November 21.—Wheat was irregular to-day, but the evening up of short sales gave prices a good tone at the close. Since a week ago Friday the tendency has been downward, and naturally the bears have taken occasion to sell rather freely. The usual indisposition to leave anything open over Sunday was demonstrated by the buying seen to-day. A remarkable good bank statement was influential in stimulating the demand. The opening was steady, despite an array of bearish items of news. December wheat opened from 75¼@75¼c, sold between 76¼ and 74¼c, closing at 75⅞c @ —¼@⅝c higher than yesterday. Cash wheat was irregular, closing steady.

Corn displayed reasonable sympathy with wheat, the tone being easy early and firm later. May corn opened at 26⅜c, advanced to 27c, closing at 26⅞@27—⅜c higher than yesterday. Cash corn was steady with no material change in prices.

Oats—As was to be expected, oats barely held their own whilst the decline in wheat was in progress. When that grain recovered, however, prices in this market received assistance therefrom. May oats closed ¼c higher than yesterday. Cash oats were steady and unchanged.

Provisions—The weakness which has been the prevailing characteristic of this market for some time past was relieved a trifle this morning. An advance in hog prices induced a little buying and shorts, who have had things pretty much their own way lately, covered. January pork closed 12½@15c higher, January lard 5@7½c higher and January ribs 7½c higher.

SPOTS AND FUTURES.

The Visible Supply of Cotton—Crop in Sight—New York Sun's Review of the Market.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, November 21.—The total visible supply of cotton for the world is 3 556,841 bales, of which 3,241,641 bales are American, against 3,608,507 bales and 3,278,387 bales respectively last year.

Receipts of cotton this week at all interior towns 239,845 bales. Receipts from the plantations 359,915 bales.

The crop in sight is 4,188,940 bales.

The Sun says: Spot cotton here was unchanged. Liverpool declined 1-32d on the spot with sales of 8,000 bales; futures there were unchanged to one point lower. The port receipts were 48 145 bales. The exports approximated 50,000 bales. New Orleans declined three points, but recovered the loss. The Chronicle states that the weather during the week has been very favorable for the gathering and the marketing of cotton. Northern spinners have taken thus far this season 597 178 bales, against 617,527 bales thus far last season. The total world's supply is now 3,556,841 bales, against 3,608 587 bales last year. The exports thus far this season aggregated 2 037 050 bales, against 1,358,038 bales in the same time last year. Futures here declined two to four points, recovered the loss and advanced one to three points, but reacted, closing unchanged to two points higher. The close was steady, after sales of 68.800 bales.

‖The speculation to-day was a very small affair. The trading was dull and featureless and the fluctuations in prices were confined within an extremely narrow range. At first prices declined slightly in sympathy with easier Liverpool advances, but in the absence of any decided pressure to sell the loss was recovered and a slight advance followed.

SEABOARD AIR LINE.

STATEMENT OF THE POOLING COMMITTEE OF THE STOCKHOLDERS.

Terms of the Agreement Which Less Than Half the Stockholders Voted to Confirm.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NORFOLK, Nov. 21.—Messrs. Louis McLane, of Baltimore, Moncure Robinson, of Philadelphia, and Judge Leigh R. Watts, of Portsmouth, the pooling committee of the Seaboard & Roanoke Railroad stock, to-day gave out the following statement regarding the committee's recent negotiations with Thomas F. Ryan for the sale of the road:

"Early in October it was ascertained that General John Gill, President of the Mercantile Trust and Deposit Company of Baltimore, the financial agent of the Seaboard Air Line, (Gen. Gill being a director in the Carolina Central R. R., one of the roads comprising that system, and also a member of the Seaboard Air Line committee,) was endeavoring to obtain options on stock of the Seaboard & Roanoke Railroad Company, which company controls the Seaboard system.

"The management, apprehending that stockholders knowing General Gill's relation to the president and the position held by him, might suppose that he was buying the stock at their suggestion, or at least with their knowledge and approval, Mr. R. C. Hoffman, president, after a consultation, issued a circular letter addressed to the stockholders, advising them of the real facts and disclaiming any connection with Mr. Gill's efforts. This was followed by a letter from General Gill attacking Mr. Hoffman's management and charging that the property of the stockholders was being impaired in value by what was called the rate war. It was then for the first time realized that General Gill was hostile to the management, of which he had been a prominent supporter, and it was determined to form a pool for the mutual protection of the stockholders who should become parties thereto.

"A pooling agreement was prepared October 2nd, and parties owing stock to the aggregate amount of 1,879 shares signed the same before the annual meeting of the Seaboard & Roanoke Railroad Company, held at Portsmouth, Va., October 6th.

"The committee named in the pooling agreement of October 2d, to-wit: Louis McLane (chairman), Leigh R Watts and Moncure R Robinson, held a conference October 5th on the Bay Line steamer with Col. Harvey, of New York, who stated that he represented a number of gentlemen who desired to purchase a controlling interest in the Seaboard & Roanoke Railroad. This conference, at which, in addition to the committee and Col. Harvey, there were present R. C. Hoffman (president) and C. D. Fisher, of Baltimore, was without result.

"On the morning of October 6th, before the annual meeting of the stockholders called for that day convened, the pooling committee had a conference with Thomas F. Ryan and Col. Harvey, the result of which was a contract between said pooling committee and the said Thomas F. Ryan. Type-written copies of the pooling contract were in possession of the members of the committee, but to facilitate matters it was agreed to have said agreement printed and a copy mailed on the afternoon of that day to every stockholder of the Seaboard & Roanoke Railroad Company, accompanied by a circular letter, requesting them if they approved of the arrangement and were willing to become parties to the agreement, to sign the same and return it to Louis McLane, chairman, prior to October 15th.

"The terms of this agreement were well known to Mr. Ryan and his friends when they treated with the committee, and he fully understood that the three gentlemen were treating with him as a committee, and on the afternoon of the 6th, after the conference had adjourned, he telegraphed a member of the committee, requesting that a copy of the agreement be mailed to him that night, at his office, No. 32 Liberty street, New York. In compliance with his request a copy was mailed him, and on the 8th of October he acknowledged its receipt.

"The pooling agreement expressly provided that no sale could be made of the pooled stock unless at least three-fourths of the aggregate number of shares signed agreed to such sale, and Mr. Ryan understood at the time the agreement with him was made that the committee had no authority over the pooled stock except that conferred by the pooling agreement, and he knew, or certainly should have known, that unless three-fourths of the stock pooled voted for a sale no sale could be made. The committee positively declined to sell a single share of the stock unless every stockholder had the privilege of selling his or her holding at the same price. Mr. Ryan insisted that the committee should take no active steps to induce stockholders to sign the pooling agreement and requested that the price he agreed to pay be regarded as confidential. It was his avowed object to have General Gill purchase as much of the stock as he could secure at $100 per share. On the 18th of October he was promptly advised of the number of shares of stock pooled and after some correspondence with him the committee submitted to the signers of the pool the question whether they would accept or refuse Mr. Ryan's offer of $125 per share. With very few exceptions every stockholder signing the pool voted, and instead of three-fourths voting in favor of the sale less than one-half were recorded in the affirmative. Mr. Ryan was at once notified of the result of the ballot, and that the stockholders declined to sell at the price named. His $60,000, the amount deposited, was returned to him. No representations of any kind were made by the committee to Mr. Ryan, nor did they obligate themselves to deliver any stock at the time the contract of October 6th was made, as before stated, very few stockholders had signed the pooling agreement. The stockholders were unknown personally to the committee and the committee had no knowledge of how many shares General Gill had secured, and hence it was simply impossible for them to give any assurance of any kind in the premises. The committee held the pooled stock as agents, and their authority over the same was limited and defined with the agreement creating the pool. The proposition of Mr. Ryan was submitted to every stockholder fairly and the committee did not seek to influence or control their votes.

"The action of the committee in the connection will bear the closest scrutiny, and it is deemed unnecessary for the gentlemen of that committee to say anything in reference to any personal reflections made by Mr. Ryan. Whether Mr. Ryan represented the Southern Railway Company in the proposed purchase is a matter with which the committee had no concern, and they are not responsible for what seems to be the universal opinion of an intelligent public, that the real object of the proposed purchase was to destroy and absorb the only competitor of that great monopoly and leave the South with its vast business interests completely at its mercy."

WEYLER FAILED IN HIS CAMPAIGN AGAINST MACEO.

Despondency in Havana—The Outlook Gloomy—Spaniards Indignant at Weyler's Failure—Gen. Pando Will Probably be His Successor—Increased Activity of the Insurgents—Gom z' Forces Marching Westward.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

KEY WEST, FLA., November 21.—Passengers who arrived from Havana to-night report that it is currently admitted that Weyler has failed in his campaign against Maceo. Though no accurate date is obtainable as to the latter's movements, all reports agree he has divided his forces into small bands who harass Spanish troops but present no chance for pitched battle or decisive results.

Weyler's marches have been painful and his soldiers have suffered great hardships. In consequence 1,800 soldiers have been sent to Candelaria sick. Most of Weyler's staff are ill and are returning to Havana. He also is failing back and will establish headquarters near Artemisa, at the estate Pilar, which he claims is a better base of operations.

The Spaniards in Havana are indignant at Weyler's inability to crush the insurrection in Pinar del Rio, and mutterings are heard. Gen. Pando, who is coming with new reinforcements, is indicated as Weyler's probable successor. All are despondent in Havana, and consider the outlook gloomy.

At the meeting to take part in the popular loan of Spain no spirit was shown. All held back, and only through the pressure of the Civil Governor, who was present, was fifty-five thousand dollars raised as a free gift to Spain. Not a cent has been added since. Luciano Ruiz, a prominent banker, and Quesada, mayor of the city, left the meeting without contributing to the fund.

Rebels in other sections of the island continue active. It is said that the important town of Victoria de Las Tunas, in Santiago province, is besieged by a strong force of insurgents.

The train starting from Cardenas yesterday was obliged to return on account of large masses of rebels crossing the line. They are said to be the vanguard of Gomez, who is reported already in Santa Clara province, marching west.

MADRID, Nov. 21.—Senor Castellano, Minister of the Colonies, denies the truth of the story cabled that there is probability of a rising in Porto Rico, despite the fact that the story was based upon official advices from that island, but El Dia affirms the accuracy of the story and declares that the Government has received advices showing the existence of a conspiracy to raise an insurrection.

El Serror gives expression to the general feeling of dissatisfaction with Gen. Weyler and asks when Gen. Azcarraga, Minister of War, is going to take command of things into his own hands.

Advices from Havana announce the arrival there of Gen. Munoz from Pinar del Rio.

A STRANGE SUICIDE.

A Man Worth a Half a Million Kills Himself Without Apparent Cause.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Helmas Romaine, ex-Commissioner of Agriculture of the State of New Jersey under Secretary Rusk, committed suicide last night at the Romaine homestead on Saddle river, in Bergen county, New Jersey, under somewhat peculiar circumstances. Mr. Romaine's residence has been in Paterson, with his family. Yesterday morning he called at the place, visiting his cousin, John Romaine, who runs the old family mill, and then spent the rest of the day with Frank Post, who is keeper of the homestead, living in a small house near the mill. After tea Mr. Romaine having learned that Post and his wife were going to accompany John Romaine and wife to a party urged them to drive the horse with which he had come from Paterson because it was better than the farm animals. This was done.

Mr. Romaine remained at Post's house with a lad named Cornelius Newell, who helped on the farm. When the Romaines and Posts returned from the party at 5 o'clock this morning, they found Helmas Romaine lying on a lounge in Post's house dead. His legs were crossed, one hand holding a revolver across his breast and there was a hole in the head above the right ear.

The relatives of the dead man can think of no cause for the act. Mr. Romaine has always been considered a wealthy man, his possessions being put as high as $500,000. He was a very successful farmer and made an excellent reputation as Commissioner of Agriculture. The place where the suicide occurred is one of the oldest mills in Bergen county, and is widely known under the family name, it having been conducted by the Romaines for several generations.

RICHMOND, November 21.—Gen. John Gill, of Baltimore, will remain sole receiver of the Cape Fear & Yadkin Valley Railroad. The application of the Farmer's Loan & Trust Company, of New York, in which C. Adolph Lane, Wm. E Strong and Geo. F. Baker applied for the appointment of a co-receiver with Gen. Gill of the Cape Fear & Yadkin Valley property, came up before Judge Simonton, of the United States Circuit Court, in chambers to-day and was argued by Mr. Charles Steele, of New York, attorney for the applicants. Judge Ed. J. Cross, of Baltimore; Judge G. H. Hudson, of South Carolina; R. O. Burton, of Raleigh; Mr. Geo. Rountree, of Wilmington, and H. B. Turner, of New York, argued against the appointment of another receiver, and when they had finished Judge Simonton promptly announced that he would dismiss the petition, and an order to that effect was entered.

LATE FOREIGN NEWS.

ELOPEMENT OF PRINCESS ELVIRA THE LEADING SENSATION.

A Desperate Situation of Affairs at Constantinople—The Financial Position Passes Belief—Establishment of a European Commission on Deposition of the Sultan the Only Hope of Relief.

[Special Cable Dispatch to the New York Sun, Copyrighted.]

LONDON, November 21.—The elopement of Princess Elvira, daughter of Don Carlos, the Spanish pretender, with the painter Folchi, in Rome, continues to be the social sensation of Europe. To-day we have a manifesto, in which the unhappy father denounces this (his second) child, whom he has disowned.

Our Rome correspondent send the facts which led to the extraordinary action of Princess Elvira. Folchi, who is a member of one of the best known families in Rome, is an artist of some talent. He is tall, 35 years old and handsome. Princess Elvira is ten years younger than he, and is also tall. She is not pretty, but is attractive. Count Folchi some years ago married a beautiful girl of good family, a daughter of Count Rappini, and has two children. It seems that Prince Del Derago and Count Folchi spent a part of last year at Viareggio, a watering place beloved by Shelley, and where were also the Countess Folchi and her children. Near Viareggio there was living the Duke Parma, to whom Count Folchi was presented by the Prince. The Prince asked Count Folchi to copy some tapestry, and treated him as one of his own guests. Near the home of the Duke is the magnificent villa of Don Carlos, to which he had sent his daughter, Elvira, who was suffering from extreme nervousness and hysteria. In one of her following visits to the Duke's villa, she became acquainted with Count Folchi, who soon inspired her with a violent affection which, becoming known to the servants, she being incapable of disguising her feelings, was communicated to the Duke. He, in the politest way, intimated to the artist that the room with the tapestry was needed for a guest, but this move was unsuccessful, as Folchi stayed in Viareggio and continued his courting and his correspondence with the Princess until his wife, becoming aware of what was going on, objected. Count Folchi then left for Florence. Meanwhile Princess Massino, a relation of Don Carlos, carried Donna Elvira off to Rome, where her nervousness and hysteria increased. This went on all last Winter. The servants of the Massimo Palace had orders to take all letters sent or received to their mistress, who thus overlooked the correspondence of her guest or prisoner. After a certain time, her letters remaining unanswered, Princess Elvira wished to post them herself, but was not allowed to do so. Choosing a moment when her friends were off their guard, she left Rome with her lover, taking with her jewels to the value of $60,000 and a large sum of money. The couple are now supposed to be in Paris under assumed names.

The Sun's reporter at Constantinople writes that nothing has amused well-informed people there so much as the desperately serious manner in which Europe has taken the Sultan's great scheme for raising the wind. It was dubbed a patriotic fund, for arming the defenders of the true faith, and outsiders swallowed the formula whole. There is not a tiny bit of patriotism about the scheme, nor is there anything savoring of good will in the offerings. Nobody subscribes except through fear of being marked as an abstainer and nobody expects to hear anything of the manner in which the money is spent. It may be that a few trusted soldiers of the imperial body guard will be better armed and receive some back pay, but nineteen-twentieths of whatever is collected will go into the palace's insatiable maw. Therefore the outside world, unaccustomed to Abdul Hamid's cunning, which as well as his ferocity, has insanity in it, may dismiss the fear that Turkey's fanatical forces are about to be armed to the teeth in order to exterminate all non-Mussulman. The financial position in Constantinople passes belief. It is much worse even than during the desperate days of 1876 preceding the deposition of Sultan Abdul Aziz. The bulk of the population has quite forgotten the color of money, and it is little short of marvelous that the rich European quarter has not been sacked by the thousands of absolutely destitute Mussulmans who hunger and thirst, not for Christian blood, but for meat and drink or money wherewith to buy them. The Sun reporter has not yet come across the respectable Turk who does not admit that the present regime is impossible and that salvation is only to be found either in the deposition of Abdul Hamid or in the establishment of an European commission to control the country's finances. Most people, Turkish and European, now incline to the belief that the latter will be the solution. Sir Edgar Vincent, president of the Imperial Ottoman Bank, is meandering about Europe in search of financiers willing to advance funds to keep the Turkish Governmental machinery going. The great financiers are shy, but doubtless Sir Edgar will manage to strike some sort of a bargain.

Few people are in a position to know the terms offered by the Porte, and fewer still cherish any hope of permanent benefit from all this juggling. Among the skeptics is King George, of Greece, who ought to be fairly well informed on such a matter, knowing how much he stands to lose or gain for himself and his people. According to the Pester Lloyd which is usually a trustworthy newspaper, His Majesty told an Austrian diplomatist this week that he had no hope that the promised reforms in Turkey would be really carried out.

WHITES AND NEGROES.

Trouble Between the Races in Albemarle County, Virginia.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

RICHMOND, Nov. 21.—News reaches the Dispatch from Scottsville, Albemarle county, that two or three days ago a band of white men, some forty or fifty in number, arrested about six miles from that place a negro who was suspected of burning the barn and stables of Mr. G. M. Jones, somes two weeks since. The negro was taken to the woods and hung up to the limb of a tree in order to make him confess. At first he protested entire innocence of any knowledge of the crime, but finally, after the operation had been repeated two or three times, said that his brother was the guilty party. The next day the negroes of the county for several miles around armed themselves with scythe-blades, guns, pistols and knives, and threatened to kill all the whites in the neighborhood. A colored preacher from Charlottesville came down and persuaded them to desist, but it is said that excitement still runs high and several white families have moved away. The whites are arming and are prepared to resist any attack from the negroes. The action of the band of whites in terrorizing the negroes is deprecated by most of the whites of that section of the country.

SPRINGFIELD, MO., Nov. 21.—The W. J. Bryan hunting party was greeted upon arrival here this evening by an enormous crowd. Notwithstanding the adverse weather, excursion trains brought in hundreds from neighboring towns and farmers assembled from every direction. There were two addresses made by Mr. Bryan this evening, one in North and one in South Springfield, and the ante-election enthusiasm was fully equalled by to-night's demonstrations. Mr. Bryan reviewed briefly the recent campaign and counselled continued agitation of the silver propaganda. He expressly desired that his identity as the leader of the faithful should be sunk.

At 11.30 p. m., Mr. Bryan left on a regular train for Kansas City, where he will be joined to-morrow by Mrs. Bryan and proceed at once to Lincoln.

A Blue Dress.

"Coke on Fashions" is not bound in calf, "Dress In Its Legal Aspect" is not taught in the law schools, but when a woman is concerned it is not far behind the evidence as a practical consideration.

Not long ago a woman had an important suit. The case was worked up—the evidence all shipshape. The last consideration was the client's dress. It must be neat, demure, becoming. The junior member inspected her critically.

"Have you a blue dress?"

She had one.

"Is fits you nicely?"

It fitted her admirably. Blue is supposed to be the color that touches most nearly a man's emotions. Blue is womanly. It has also been called tender and true. She was instructed to wear the blue dress without ornaments. She did so. It was a suit for damages. She not only won her case, but received ten times the amount the lawyers hoped for. That amount her case and their skill honestly won. The surplus they attributed to the becoming blue frock.—San Francisco Examiner.

The Woman of Forty.

The woman of 40 or thereabout whose great aim in life is to preserve her figure and her complexion not only pays strictest attention to her bath, gymnastics and massage, but she is more careful as to what she eats than an old Roman gladiator. One society woman who at 46 is famous for her good looks and generally attractive and youthful appearance never puts a bit of bread in her mouth. It might be rank poison for the scant civility it receives at her hands. Nor does a sweet of any kind, sort or description ever pass her lips, nor an ice nor coffee nor chocolate. What does she eat? Beef, mutton and all vegetables that grow above ground, but of these she eats only sparingly, so fearful is milady of embonpoint, that foe to youthful appearance.

A Woman Who Trades.

Miss Millard of Teddington, England, has been in the business of buying and selling anything for which there is a market for about 15 years. She has deals in horses, oil paintings, instruments of science and torture, playing cards, pearls, old fashioned firearms and fans, sundials, carriage gates, locks, books, autographs, coins, medals, antiques—in fact, there is no end to the list. She once bought a church, and also bought and sold the gates of Hampton Court palace. With the late Frank Marshall, editor of the "Henry Irving Shakespeare," she traded a sapphire ring for a sow and litter of nine pigs. She has a great fancy for curios, and her collection includes some very rare articles.

Jacques Louis David.

In France art, like society, was tottering to its fall when the revolution burst and hastened the end. The spirit of which the revolution was the political outcome had also, as in the pictures of Greuze and Vien, been working beneath the surface of the art world, and with the fall of the empire these aspirations took definite shape. The art so long dedicated to whims and caprices of the aristocracy began, under the impulse of the new environment, to express the sentiments and ideals of the common people. Cut off from the past by the sword of retribution, in the turmoil of the present they sought inspiration for the future in the great acts of patriotism of the Romans. And the general intelligence of Europe, interested in the discoveries at Pompeii, gave it form on its artistic side.

These feelings and aspirations seemed to become incarnate in the work of Jacques Louis David. A friend of Robespierre and a leader in the revolution party, he on the collapse of the movement narrowly escaped with his life. But with the rise of Napoleon, who appointed him his painter in chief, his influence again became paramount, and despite the many phases art has undergone and the innumerable cliques into which painters have divided in the interval it is still, modified and touched by reality, a living force in French art. David's conception of pictorial art was somewhat cold and lifeless. He led his confreres back not to nature, but to antiquity, as expressed in sculpture. Respect for the achievements of the past underlay all his work and paralyzed his invention and resource.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Unlucky Days and Garments.

"My beliefs run to days," says a woman in an eastern paper. "Every woman who entertains is sure there is one day in the week on which she can have no success in any undertaking. My bad day is Thursday, but, then, I know lots of women who never make any positive engagements for Saturdays. Saturday is a very black day in society lists, and there are numbers of otherwise sensible individuals who will never entertain on the day of the week on which some member of their family has died, just as there are those who, having once worn a gown to a funeral, will promptly give the whole costume away. Moreover, some girls I know feel there are certain garments in which they always meet with ill luck. It may be a pair of pretty stockings or gloves, or a dainty petticoat that shows signs of being hoodooed, and once the evil genius is accurately fixed on the accursed garment, off it goes, and usually the possessor burns it or gives it to some girl she has a grudge against."

The Army as a Career.

The object of an army in the United States is not necessarily in the main to conduct campaigns and fight battles nor to take human life. As the city police must watch over the city and guard it against all sorts of danger, being ready, with its weapons of offense or defense, to strike when other devices fail, so our army watches against certain dangers to the republic, giving nerve and strength to the executive—helping to restrain wild Indians, to capture mistaken hordes of tramps, or to quiet mob violence aimed against the common weal, or with naval help to hold back a public enemy, but really, of course, like the effective city police, to strike at command, when the commander in chief, with the sovereign nation behind him, has come to the last resort of human expedients for guarding the nation's life or its honor.—Major General Howard in Forum.

Thinks Sunday Marriages Not Legal.

A couple who applied to the Rev. J. J. Blackburn of Cincinnati on Sunday evening to marry them were refused on the ground that he never performed a marriage ceremony on Sunday. Mr. Blackburn said he considered a marriage a business transaction, and he could not conscientiously solemnize the ceremony on Sunday. He said no other legal transaction could be made on Sunday and stand the test of the courts, and every marriage performed on Sunday must be an illegal one. He said he had never heard of a case being tested on this point and does not know that the courts would take his view of the subject, but he decided to be on the safe side and has never and will never perform this ceremony on Sunday.—Baltimore American.

Nonfreezing Pipes.

It may be worth while to note a statement by Sir James Crichton Browne which suggests a method of avoiding the difficulties experienced during the cold of winter. Speaking at a congress of plumbers, he pointed out that water pipes would never burst if protected by a vacuum. Why, then, he asked, could not plumbers invent a vacuum pipe? A space even an eighth of an inch of a high vacuum would be sufficient. Inclose the pipe to be protected in an outer tube, exhaust the air from the intervening space and hermetically seal the inclosing tube at the ends. Then no changes of temperature could affect the protected pipe.—London Globe.

Scrupulous Artist.

A great deal of fun has been poked at the realistic school in literature and painting, and it must be confessed that some ground has been given to the enemy.

A recent writer relates of a certain French painter that he "had just finished a picture of an Assyrian bath, and so careful was he of the details, that the towels hanging up were all marked 'Nebuchadnezzar' in the corner, in cuneiform characters."

Syrup of Figs

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

Scratched or Bruised Furniture.

Scratches and bruises will occur on one's furniture, especially where there are children. If a fresh hickory or walnut kernel is rubbed gently into the bruises, they will quickly disappear. Then, too, those spots that will come no one knows how or from where on furniture should be rubbed well with sweet oil and turpentine, washed off with warm soapsuds and polished with crude oil. Certain furniture dealers have for sale their own makes of furniture polish. When obtained from a reliable place, this is better than the average polish made at home.

A Crepon Candle Shade.

Silk crepon makes a fascinating candle shade. The foundation should be made of cardboard. Over this place your silk, which should be fringed at one end. Here and there, as regular intervals along the edge, catch up the center of the plaits and sew a tiny bow of baby ribbon or gold or silver cord. Twist the same round the top of the shade as a finish, and at very small cost you will have a most delightful addition to your dinner table.

Match Scratches on the Walls.

When a good housekeeper finds her paint looking badly, she does not despair. If matches have been scratched on bare walls by careless hands, she cuts a lemon in two and rubs the marks with it. The acid is washed off with clear water, and when the spot is dry she rubs it with whiting until the stains cannot be seen.

Teething and Dribbling.

When children are teething, the constant dribbling will wet their chests and cause them to catch cold unless precautions are taken. Flannel dribbling bibs should be provided and changed immediately they have become wet. If the dribbling is excessive, oiled silk bibs may be worn under the flannel ones.
